

B.C. SAVAGED BY NEW FIRES RAIN COOLS NEWFOUNDLAND

Troops Join Fight

ST. JOHN'S Nfld. (UPI) — Heavy rain fell for the first time in three weeks in all regions of Newfoundland yesterday as more than 1,000 troops flown in by the federal government prepared to join weary Newfoundlanders in the summer-long battle against forest fires.

"The rain is the real new thing this morning," a fire official said as an emergency evacuation by train sleeping cars of patients of a hospital was called off.

The rain started shortly after midnight after a new onslaught forced 200 families to flee Glenwood, a community 15 miles west of Gander, where ravaging forest fires nearly engulfed the international airport earlier this week.

Three federal cabinet ministers flew in and immediately met with Newfoundland authorities. They were being followed by an additional 1,000 soldiers, airlifted on orders by Prime Minister John Diefenbaker. An initial group of 222 troops landed at St. John's airport, following an urgent call for federal help from Premier Joseph Smallwood.

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP)—Shock troops and reserves were being mustered last night in many parts of British Columbia to battle a savage onslaught of new forest fires following a severe lightning storm.

The storm, accompanied by 30 to 50-miles-an-hour winds, cut a 400 by 50-mile swath through valuable stands of pine, spruce, hemlock and fir and with more than 50 new outbreaks had forest protection officers reeling.

The storm struck an area from Tweedsmuir Park in the cattle-rich Cariboo country, 310 miles northwest of Vancouver, southeastward to Penticton, in the heart of the fruit growing Okanagan Valley, 150 air miles east of Vancouver.

SITUATION NAME

The situation was the same in both the Prince Rupert and Kamloops forest districts. "Everything seemed to explode Thursday night," said Ted Jones, forestry spokesman at Smithers.

Norm McRae, assistant Kamloops forester, said here "the situation is extremely critical... worse now than it has been all summer."

CRITICAL STAGE

The storm came at a time when the manpower and machine situation in the Prince George and Prince Rupert districts reached the critical stage. Forest service officials said the 2,322 fire fighters who have been working in the districts for weeks without time off are under great strain.

"Many of the men are bone-tired," said Jones. "They've been out on the fire lines working 48 hours a day for three weeks and need a rest and help. We are putting together new crews."

The crews are volunteers. There has been no conscription in the area.

Work Round Clock

Round-the-clock shift work is in progress at Victoria Machinery Depot's Bay Street plant where workmen are racing a mid-September deadline for delivery of 578,000 worth of equipment for a new sulphur recovery plant at Waterton, Alta. Men, shown above, swarm over first of six 50-ton reaction furnaces designed by VMD engineers. Furnaces are the largest of their kind ever built in Canada. (Colonist photo by Ted Harris.)

Quit Base UN Order To France

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Without a single dissenting voice, the UN General Assembly demanded Friday night that France pull her troops back into her base at Bizerte and negotiate to give the base up to Tunisia.

The assembly adopted a resolution to that effect by a vote of 86 to 0 with 30 abstentions. Three countries were absent.

But France had served notice that she would ignore any decision the assembly reached, and she boycotted the five-day special session that led up to the vote.

Her North Atlantic allies split on the roll call. Denmark, Iceland, Norway and Turkey voted for the proposal. The United States, Canada, Britain, and others in the alliance abstained.

Others voting in the affirmative were the European neutrals, the nine-nation Soviet bloc, six Latin-American countries and all Afro-Asian countries except Japan, which abstained.

Jet Crash Kills Child

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—An F-100 jet fighter plane slammed into a suburban residential area Friday, killing a small child and injuring at least three other persons.

Thunder Air Force Base identified the pilot as Lieut. W. H. Barbour.

Philip Bound For Argentina

LONDON (Reuters)—Prince Philip will visit Argentina next year. It was reported Friday night.

His visit is to begin March 22 and is expected to last about a week, the report said.

Forest Opening 'Risk'

Vancouver forest district officials have decided to take a "calculated risk" and leave the district's forests open to vacationers this weekend.

But the chief forester warned that any rash of man-caused fires may result in further restrictions being imposed.

BAN LIFTED

A travel ban on the Vancouver Island section of the district south of Bowser has been lifted, which clears the entire island of travel restrictions. Still in force however, is the ban against campfires.

The fire hazard was described as between "high and extreme" and continued warm, dry weather is forecast for the weekend.

SIX NEW FIRES

Up to 6 p.m. yesterday, six new fires were reported in the past 24 hours, bringing the total number of fires burning to 55. There are 362 men on the fire lines.

Berlin Stirs Anew

BERLIN (Reuters)—Scattered incidents were reported on the East-West border Friday as East German Communist leader Walter Ulbricht came out with new threats to allied access to West Berlin.

Ulbricht declared all Western "intervention" must go and claimed the right to take control of the access routes—land, water and air—after the signing of a German peace treaty with Russia.

WARING SHOTS

Meanwhile, Communist guards fired warning shots to scare away about 30 West Berliners who had crowded to the barbed-wire barrier in the French sector.

The warning rattle of sub-machine-gun fire came after a guard warned the crowd to "go back 100 metres or we will shoot."

A West Berlin police spokesman said East Berlin police in another incident Friday night used a water cannon and threw tear gas grenades at a crowd near the border in the U.S. sector.

'Reaction Beat Me' —Quadros

BRASILIA, Brazil (UPI)—President Janio Quadros resigned unexpectedly yesterday charging he had been defeated "by the forces of reaction" in and out of the country. His supporters immediately launched a strike and demonstration in Rio de Janeiro and an anti-American mob stoned the U.S. embassy there.

The 44-year old Quadros, in office only seven months, quit after an anti-Communist political opponent attacked him as a man who planned to betray the "democratic regime and traditions of Brazil."

BACKERS RALLY

But Quadros' backers immediately rallied to his support. Railway workers in Rio stopped suburban commuter trains and a crowd of demonstrators chanting "Long live Janio" had to be broken up with tear gas when it became disorderly.

A mob estimated at 500 persons stoned the U.S. embassy, breaking several windows and throwing tear gas grenades into the U.S. information service office.

PUBLIC ORDER

The Archbishop of Rio de Janeiro, Cardinal DeBarros Camara, appealed for calm and public order, but there were indications tension was spreading in the wake of Quadros' dramatic action.

The Brazilian finance ministry announced all banks will be closed until Tuesday "in view of the moment which the country is passing."

TO HIS SIDE

Quadros' political supporters also rallied to his side. Recife Mayor Miguel Arraes said if Quadros' resignation was "forced by the reaction, it has no validity."

Former Minister Ademar Azeiteiro offered his resignation. Quadros said he had been thwarted in his efforts to create a Brazil for Brazilians and that "terrible forces rose against me and delivered me to infamy under excuse of collaboration."

"I was defeated by the forces of reaction," he said.

TROUBLED MONTHS

Quadros handed in his resignation after seven troubled months in office. The chamber of deputies immediately accepted it and Ranieri Mazzilli, president of the chamber, was sworn in as acting president until vice-president Joao Goulart returns from a visit to Communist China.

Goulart arrived in Singapore last night from Peking and disclosed he had signed a $56,000,000 trade pact with Peking. But he denied that Quadros' efforts to seal Red China in the United Nations had anything to do with the pact. He said yesterday in a

JANIO QUADROS

Hong Kong he favored Red China's admission to the U.N.

Quadros' dealings with the Communist world had roused the anger of Carlos Lacerda, governor of Guanabara state and editor of a Rio de Janeiro newspaper. He bitterly attacked Quadros in a radio and television broadcast last night.

By coincidence, Quadros' resignation came seven years and a day after president Getulio Vargas of Brazil committed suicide after a run-in with Lacerda.

Lacerda in his attack on Quadros said there is a plan afoot to create a "political climate" similar to that which existed in 1935 when "Vargas gave plenty of rope to the Communists and then accumulated powers to combat them in conditions which ended up in a dictatorship."

Talks Bring Resignation

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Government sources said Friday Foreign Minister Adolfo Maglia will resign, if he has not already done so, because of the uproar over a meeting President Arturo Frondizi had this week with Cuban Economic Minister Ernesto Guepact. He said yesterday in a

Forces Buildup Seen for Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—An increase in the armed forces manpower ceiling and higher expenditures for both military and civilian equipment and supplies may be among the defence projects to be recommended to Parliament when it resumes its session Sept. 7.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker

said after a cabinet meeting

Friday the fourth this week—

the government has concluded

the general phase of its study of Canadian preparedness in light of the Berlin crisis.

He said earlier, during the course of the cabinet's series of almost daily meetings, that any buildup in Canadian forces and equipment would be along conventional—rather than nuclear—lines. Canada supports the idea of nuclear weaponry for NATO only if NATO members can agree on a joint control plan.

Canada's armed forces manpower ceiling now is 140,000. It can be increased only by act of Parliament and the armed forces are generally up to strength now. Canada's commitment to NATO is fully up to its target.

PAY ALLOWANCES

The defence budget is about $1,000,000,000. If increased expenditures are put before Parliament they are expected to be mainly in the category of pay and allowances for troops and increased equipment and supplies for the emergency measures organization.

PREMIER SMALLWOOD

Smallwood Links IWA to Fires

ST. JOHN'S Nfld. (CP)—Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland said Friday "most of the Newfoundland people believe the IWA is behind many of the fires" burning in the province's forests.

The IWA is the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) decertified as bargaining agent for Newfoundland's 15,000 loggers during a 1958 woods strike.

DELIBERATELY SET

Mr. Smallwood was asked in a interview whether he thought some of the province's fires were deliberately set.

"It doesn't matter what I think, but I know that most of the Newfoundland people believe the IWA is behind many of the fires."

Asked for elaboration, Mr. Smallwood said, "Isn't that enough?"

1,000,000 ACRES

Earlier, Mr. Smallwood said the raging fires have burned 1,000,000 acres in Newfoundland—equal to three-quarters of the land area of Prince Edward Island.

Mr. Smallwood, calculating that each acre would have yielded 10 cords of pulpwood, said the 10,000,000 cords destroyed would have supplied Bowaters Newfoundland Pulp and Paper Mills and Anglo-Newfoundland Development company, the province's two paper mills, for 10 years.

$1,000,000 Real Estate Fraud Being Uncovered in Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—To be held next week and civil actions may be brought. The frauds are said to involve apartments and motels throughout the city which changed hands for small amounts of cash and shares.

They said evidence points to 17 persons being defrauded of $850,000 and they have yet to interview 30 more alleged victims which could swell the total past $1,000,000.

Fraud charges would likely plained he turned over property worth $130,000 for which he was to receive a registered mortgage against a downtown motel. He also received 30,000 shares in two companies.

The man said the mortgage was never registered, his money was gone and he now was living in a single room. A woman reported that her husband suffered a heart attack and died when they found that a $48,000 equity in a motel they turned over was lost. The woman now was living on social assistance.

William A. Craig, a lawyer hired by the attorney-general's department to oversee the investigation, said in many cases individuals acted against the advice of their lawyers.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

MY friend Alec Merriman writes an outdoor column. Thousands of people read it, seeking good places to camp or go fishing.

Alec is the boy to find the best camp grounds and fishing water. Almost every week he discovers some wilderness retreat, where a clear stream gushes down to the sea, among cool, nicely spaced cedar trees and grassy meadows.

The place lies at the end of a rough road that isn't marked on any map. Its existence is known to no one but a few loggers and a couple of holidaying schoolmarmas from Nebraska, who stumbled on it while patrolling the woods in search of men.

These selfish hogs are keeping the place a secret. Once in a while they visit the beauty spot, languidly bail a cluster of five-pound trout from the creek and grill them over a camp fire, and hit the trail again, leaving the woods to the squirrels.

What a waste of natural resources! But Alec corrects this situation. You might wonder how he ever gets to hear about such a place. Well, Alec is a born reporter. He knows a lot of people, and he has a kindly-uncle manner about him that invites confidence.

He never does promise to keep quiet about the things people tell him. But he is a genial, sympathetic listener, that they can't imagine him sitting down a typewriter and reducing their conversation to cold print.

One day he gets talking, over a glass of beer, to a logger from that part of the country, who lets a few words slip about the creek and the sandy beach and cedar trees, and five-pound trout.

Alec travels up there and comes back with a creek full of fish, and in less time than it takes to say "Good conservation practices," he has a story in the paper telling about the place in detail, complete with route map.

That woodland road is soon crowded with station wagons and boat trailers.

Two weeks later, Alec returns to the place, and finds it changed beyond recognition. He can't push his way down to the creek without stumbling over tent ropes and pegs.

The creek is full of broken glass. The few remaining fish are cowering in terror in the shadow of drowned cardboard cartons and orange juice cans.

Back goes Alec to the office and writes an angry story: "Hooligans invade forest sanctuary! Vandals scatter garbage, fell trees, destroy recreational values for a generation!"

If Alec keeps on discovering beauty spots and fishing holes at his present speed, there will soon be no beauty and no fish left.

Ottawa (UPI)—Two paint men burned in an explosion and flash fire on the roof of the Parliament Buildings yesterday were in "critical condition" in hospital last night.

The two, Douglas Connelly, 43, and Donald Davidson, 47, were waterproofing a water tank when it exploded. The fire was believed to have been started by a spark igniting paint thinner.

Schools Detect—Parents Must Act

School health authorities took pains to detect every pupil suffering from eye defects, but it is up to parents to make sure their children visit an eye doctor if needed, an spokesman for Victoria English

Health Department said yesterday.

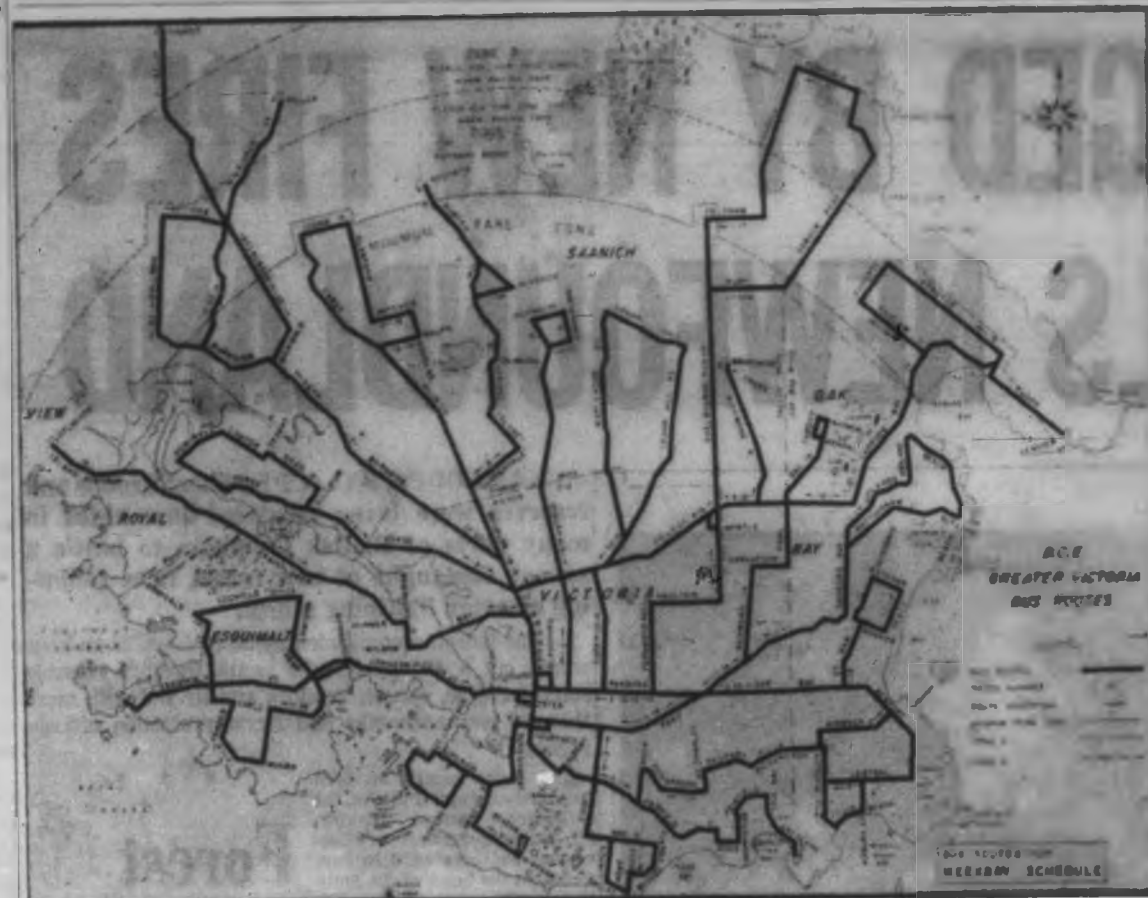

Medical health officer Dr. Elizabeth Mahaffy, answering criticism of vision testing in schools, said all children entering the school district for the first time are thoroughly examined by the school health officer.

Every second year thereafter there is an examination for all pupils. Eye charts are used to screen out those children without trouble, so that all the efforts of the health group can be devoted to those with eye problems.

"Any child with eye problems is examined more intensively by the school nurse and if necessary a visit is made to the child's home to recommend attention by an eye doctor," said Dr. Mahaffy.

The medical health officer said frequent criticism is subject to frequent criticism are used only as a guide because "many full test" treatment

Luxton Noisy Today As Fair Hits Peak

Quiet little community of Luxton, on the way to Sooke, will be a noisy place today with the official opening of the 1961 Luxton Fair.

An unusual procession of everything from bicycles to horses and cows will wind its way in a parade from Belmont High School at 1 p.m. to the Luxton fairgrounds where Esquimalt MLA Herbert Bruch will open the festivities at 1:30 p.m.

OLD-FASHIONED Farmers hoping to take home first prizes will be bringing in their livestock for today's judging, and many families from this part of the Island will be driving out to enjoy the old-fashioned country fairground atmosphere.

Yesterday was ladies' day at the fair. Judges were busy handing out ribbons to the products of domestic skill, primarily from the kitchen and garden.

Children stuffed themselves with hot dogs and candy floss. Proud, prize-winning housewives lingered protectively near their ribbon-bedecked entries.

Western music drifted through the air from a loud-speaker, fair officials were running hither and yon taking care of hundreds of unexpected tasks which seemed to pile up at the last minute.

Highlight of the day came at 7 p.m. when Gail Perry, 2533 Sooke Road, was chosen Queen of the Fair. Gail, standing between the other two queen finalists, Barbara Merriman, 1184 Goldstream, and Sherry Hupfiesch, Island Highway, was crowned by Barbara Buckley, last year's queen.

The fairgrounds will be open all day today.

Priory's Rototiller AWOL

Anyone seen a small rototiller running around AWOL? If you have, a Benedictine nun at St. Mary's Priory will be glad to hear about it.

Sister Hildegard, who tends a five-acre garden plot on the priory grounds, bought the machine with money she earned last winter by teaching in her spare time.

Loss of the machine means a return to the hand-powered spade for the nun—at least until she can earn another $60 in her spare time.

"I have five children, aged 1 to 7, and have never had any stretch marks or stretch marks. Please explain if you can—Mrs. M. S."

I can't. All I know is that some skins stretch better than others. Gaining too much weight in pregnancy certainly increases the intensity of stretch marks. In short, all I can say is that some skins do and some don't.

Phenobarbital should be taken in suitably small doses, but it doesn't "make you mean." After your recent experience, don't you think your doctor knew what he was doing better than whoever it was who gave you that misinformation?

Quiet Drive Opens To Shelve Winnie

... too old to serve?

LONDON (UPI)—A quiet campaign has begun in Sir Winston Churchill's home constituency to send the 85-year-old hero-statesman upstairs to the House of Lords and let a younger man represent Wansford-Woodford in the Commons.

The voters of Wansford-Woodford have returned Sir Winston to the Commons regularly in each election since 1945 and Churchill himself has indicated he would like to serve in the House of Commons until he dies.

HEADLINE ATTENTION

Woodford's local weekly, the Woodford Guardian, has been giving the question headline attention for weeks and the question of whether Sir Winston should take a postage has been debated throughout the constituency.

The Guardian said "Liberals and Socialists claim that Sir Winston is no longer able to represent the constituency properly and that he ought to make way for a younger man. But Conservatives are rallying around the flag and are ignoring attacks made upon Sir Winston who has been MP for Woodford since 1945."

TOO OLD

The newspaper quoted from a published comment by Malcolm Muggeridge, former editor of Punch Magazine, to the effect that "Sir Winston is too old to know what is going on in the House of Commons, hindered as he is by short sight and deafness."

Alan Philpott, chairman of Woodford's Liberal party, said, "Everyone will agree Sir Winston has done a tremendous service to this country in the past and without his leadership we would have been lost in the last war."

TIME COME

"But in view of his advanced years there is a widespread feeling that the time has come for a younger man to take over as the citizens of Wansford-Woodford may be represented by an active member of Parliament," Philpott said.

11,000 UN Troops Start to Disarm 13,000 in Katanga

ELISABETHVILLE (Reuters)—The 11,000 Indian, Irish and Swedish troops of the United Nations Congo force Friday started operations aimed at disarming the 13,000-strong forces of secessionist Katanga province.

In a surprise move, men of a crack UN Indian battalion began pouring out of UN transport planes at the Elisabethville airport Friday morning from a garrison in northern Katanga. The entire battalion will have arrived by today.

CRUCIAL OPERATION

UN officials said the crucial operations include tightening controls on the movements of the army and police forces of the breakaway province before disarming its men.

Swedish and Irish troops were to be dispatched to the former Belgian base at Kamina—one of the most modern in Africa—and to Jadotville and Kolwezi, the main airport still under Katanga's control.

TRAIN CADETS

The officials said a UN force also would go to a former uranium mining centre now used by Katanga to train military cadets.

Friday's move followed discussions this week in Leopoldville, capital of the central government, among top UN officials.

RETURNED

Meanwhile, President Moise Tshombe of Katanga returned unexpectedly from northern Katanga to his capital.

At a hastily summoned press conference, Godefroid Munongo, Katanga's minister of the interior, said he had received "unconfirmed reports" that the central Congolese government had demanded the disarming of Katanga troops.

WILL REACT

He said Katanga would act in "legitimate self-defence" if there was any attempt to carry this out.

Munongo said UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld "wants to crush us as soon as he can."

Naval Blast Kills Five Razes Plant

WASHINGTON (UPI)—An explosion of undetermined origin demolished a reinforced concrete building last night at the Indian Head, Md., naval propellant plant near here and killed five technicians who were mixing materials used in rocket and missile fuel.

The blast threw parts of bodies over a wide area, Cmdr. Russell Ward, executive officer of the plant, said. Those killed were all civilians. No one else was in the building at the time.

Ward estimated the damage to the 40 by 80-foot, one-story building at $200,000.

Easily two-thirds of the delegates come from Africa and Asia. If the conference is successful, a further meeting will be held next year in Africa, under the sponsorship of Africans.

Prayer Answers Prayer

LONDON (UPI)—The Journal of the Institute of Chiropractors reports that an exasperated chiropractor parked his car in a no-parking zone with this message on the windshield:

"I have circled this block 10 times. I have an appointment to keep. Forgive us our trespasses."

When he returned, he found this note: "I've circled this block for 30 years. If I don't give you a ticket, I lose my job. Lead us not into temptation."

'Remember Blitz' Greets Germans

PEMBROKE, Wales (Reuters)—The first German combat soldiers over to see host on British soil were greeted Friday night by demonstrators waving a banner proclaiming: "No German troops in Wales. Remember the Swansea Blitz."

Six officers and 44 men, an advance party of the 84th Panzer Battalion, arrived at the nearby training centre of Castlemartin to prepare the way for 200 additional members of their unit.

As they passed through the gates of the camp, demonstrators held up anti-German banners, while two local girls set up counter-choirs in favor of the Germans.

There are more than 26,000 miles of navigable inland waterways in Great Britain.

An Elusive Pimpernel

EARLIER this week when he was in New Brunswick the premier declared that the reason he took over the B.C. Electric was to cut the cost of power to consumers. Federal taxes on the company as a private corporation made rates high in this province compared with others, and with none to pay as a crown corporation this would result in cheaper power.

Now that he is back home in Victoria Mr. Bennett gives another reason. The B.C. Electric was expropriated, he says, to provide employment.

Both cheaper power and more jobs would be a boon none can gainsay, but there is doubt that they loom very close in the offing. There have been hints warning consumers not to expect any early reduction of power rates, and job-hunters have also been told not to rush off to the Peace River country.

Mr. Bennett's vision is a long one, however; no doubt he expects the public to be patient.

The premier explains that there were no big hydro projects ahead. The fish problem barred Fraser development and he couldn't go ahead with the Columbia because it is an international waterway. This left only the Peace, which patently has been his goal all along.

Yet only the other day, answering criticism about the Columbia hold-up, he said the Columbia was going ahead and cited the current engineering work being done there as proof.

It is all very confusing. When it comes to public utterance Mr. Bennett is a veritable elusive pimpernel.

The premier indicates he was willing to risk his tenure of office over the B.C. Electric absorption. He makes the neat point that the Legislature voted unanimously in favor of the measure, which certainly does undercut the objections now raised by his political opponents.

Obviously Mr. Bennett believes his power policies are good for the province, but he would make matters much clearer if he were more consistent in his statements. He is willing to let history decide if his actions are right, but the public is more concerned with the results in its own day.

Mr. Bennett's case would be much stronger, in this and other matters, if he did not seem so contradictory and express so many different points of view. It is his bent to play with public expectations, but this predilection can be overcome.

Communist Failures

FROM YUGOSLAVIA comes news that the young people of that country, especially in the cities, are enthusiastic about jazz and not about Communism; from China simultaneously comes word that Communism is not working well on the farms, that to increase production the rulers of the country are having to restore some degree of "capitalist" self-interest by allowing peasants to sell limited amounts of their commodities for individual gain.

Should the West be cheered?

Not much as far as immediate consequences are concerned. Neither Communist regime is apt to come apart at the seams because of these deficiencies. The boys and girls of Yugoslavia may not be interested in President Tito's brand of Communism—nor in any kind of politics—but they are enmeshed in it, inescapably as they will find when they become workers of running the enterprises and collectives.

The peasants in China's fields and the workers in China's factories may be hungry; the country's food shortages may have resulted as much from weakness of the Communist agricultural system as from "natural calamities" which have been given the blame, but it is nevertheless too much to expect that the Chinese masses will or can overthrow their Communist rulers. It is equally too much to expect that these masters will admit the failings of Communism, and adopt new principles except to the most limited degree they find necessary.

If Western encouragement is to be gained at all from these Communist disappointments in Yugoslavia and China, it is in the long-term view, for both instances go to show that human nature is much the same among the oppressed as it is among the free. Competitive spirit is inherent in man, the joy of living in youth, and neither quality will endure enslavement forever.

Nearing Fruition

EXPERIENCE has taught one to be wary about expansion of the Patricia Bay Airport, the plans for this project have been deferred so often and so long. They seem about ready to come to fruition, however.

Reeve George Chatterton announces that the two governments, federal and provincial, have agreed on relocation of the highway; runway extension has been formally approved; the funds are available; and tenders for the new terminal building will be called on November 30. That being so it should be plain sailing from now on.

The new federal member for Esquimalt-Saanich is to be commended on pushing the project as urgently as he has done. It is never easy to persuade Ottawa officials to see over the Rockies.

Mr. Chatterton expresses the hope that the entire program may be finished in time to cope with the expected tourist traffic next year, with both the local centenary and the Seattle world fair acting as a stimulus to increased aerial travel. One imagines it will be a near thing, however.

Unless the road diversion and runway extension get under way pretty soon the time limit will run out. Terminal tenders called only one month before the year ends suggest no actual start on the building much before next spring. On the basis of present arrangements the project will be lucky indeed to be completed before the tourist rush of 1962.

The Seattle fair opens in April, for instance, which implies an early tourist season for Victoria next year. Frozen up as Ottawa will be shortly for months to come, perhaps this affects the official eye there and makes it myopic. It may not be sufficiently well known in the national capital that the Patricia Bay area is free of the winter drawbacks common to Eastern Canada and that outdoor work can proceed here on most days of the winter season.

The quicker these airport improvements can begin the better, therefore; the project would also help to alleviate the winter unemployment problem, a facet alone that invites an early start. But Mr. Chatterton can be depended on to press home the advantage he has already gained; if the job is not done with celerity it will not be his fault.

For West Berliners

An Illusion Shattered

By MARQUEE CHILDS, from Berlin.

NOTHING in Germany will ever be the same again after August thirtieth. These words are spoken by Mayor Willy Brandt with the subdued discipline that seems to have grown out of the turbulent drama of his life. As a young Socialist he fled from the Nazis in 1933, took refuge in Norway, he became a journalist and reported the Spanish civil war from the Loyalist side. Captured by the Nazis after the invasion of Norway, he managed to escape death.

In 1947 he returned to ruined Berlin, resumed his German citizenship and along with the first postwar mayor, Ernst Reuter, fought for the independence and freedom of the city against the Communists. What Brandt means is that now that the East is sealed off, and the slowing of even the trickle of refugees that persisted after August 13 testifies to the effectiveness of the sealing process, the West can no longer pretend at any responsibility for all of Germany.

The illusion that reunification with a united Berlin as its symbol would come in the foreseeable future seems to have been shattered. That illusion was nourished, above all, by Chancellor Adenauer who, as the father figure of a resurgent Germany, held out the hope that all would be as it once before with only a little pause.

The mood of uncertainty and doubt in Berlin derives from a realization that a change has taken place so sweeping as to cloud the future. Brandt and many others have criticized the West and in particular President Kennedy for failing to take more vigorous action when the Communists in East Germany sealed the Berlin border. This reporter asked Brandt what in his opinion should have been done or could be done now. He explained that while he opposed invoking economic sanctions against East Germany as a separate measure he believes this should be considered in the framework of a whole series of steps.

But what Brandt's criticism seems to come down to is the failure of the West to take the initiative in the crisis over Germany and Berlin. He pointed out that it had been 11 weeks since the Kennedy-Khrushchev meeting in Vienna and no move had come from the Western side except in response to action by Moscow. He also pointed out that he proposed a 52-nation peace conference on Germany and this was promptly slapped down by Adenauer.

The contest between the chancellor of the Federal Republic and the mayor of Berlin is a further complication in an already complex situation. Adenauer and his Christian Democratic party see the election campaign as an opportunity to win another outright majority and confirm once and for all Germany's close cooperation in the European community and NATO. Brandt and his party, the Social Democratic party, see the mayor as the choice of voters who know they can no longer shelter under the Adenauer father image as children not to be treated with independent political judgments. Each side professes to believe the August 13 action has helped its cause, with the Socialists saying they now are confident they will get 40 per cent of the vote instead of the 28 to 32 per cent shown by the polls.

It is a bitter campaign, with an underground smear directed against Brandt. Adenauer has not put aside the Berne parliamentarism that marked his past campaigns. Twice since the newest Berlin crisis he has directed a bitter personal attack against the Berlin mayor as "Willy Brandt, alias Frahm". This is a reference to Brandt's illegitimate origin and the fact that he took his mother's name of Frahm until he assumed the name of Willy Brandt as a young worker in the Socialist party.

The two parties have begun to fall out over the consequences of the sealing of the Berlin border. One of the newspapers closest to the Christian Democrats, the Deutsche Zeitung, attacked Brandt for criticizing the West, saying his speech to the Berlin mass meeting had boomeranged. Berliners are by nature skeptical and humorously cynical. But it would be surprising if the way in which the present crisis is being chewed over in the election campaign did not add to the sense of doubt and even fear that you hear from almost any Berliner you talk to.

Rumors flourish in this atmosphere. One rumor is that in the Kennedy-Khrushchev talks at Vienna Khrushchev notified the president the border would be sealed and the president indicated there would be no reprisal from the West. This fits with the view that the Western Allies privately welcomed the action since it means that the question of what to do about the flow of refugees has been removed from the problems that must be negotiated with the Soviets on the future status of Berlin.

The best refutation of this rumor is that the Allies seem to have been caught flatfooted when the border was sealed with Russian tanks and armored cars backing up the move. One criticism here is that it was 96 hours before the Allied commanders responded with a statement of protest which most West Berliners, including Mayor Brandt, considered far too mild.

The fears of the Berliners of the West living on an island in the cruel sea of communism are not new. When the Russians clamped a blockade on the access routes to West Germany in 1948 these skeptical people said that nothing could be done by the Americans and the city would be absorbed. The air lift proved them wrong.

Gestures such as the visit of Vice-President Johnson and the former Berlin commandant, Lucius Clay, are useful to build morale. With his strong words about freedom and standing firm in defence of the city Johnson will help to assure Berliners that the West intends to live up to its often-repeated pledges. But, as Mayor Brandt said in his speech, they will look for more than words when it comes to the assurance that all of Berlin is not to be swallowed up in the Communist sea.

Just now they are watching warily, warily waiting

Not Comparable with Thirties

Prairies Weather the Drought

By HARRY MALIJEWELL
Telegram News Service

been generally dry on the prairies for the past five years. One reason it hasn't the same impact as did the drought of the Thirties is that, then, crop failure combined with a world-wide depression—low yields and low prices.

The other reason stems mainly from four sources: the farms themselves, permanent legislation, emergency government action, and the diversified prairie economy.

The farmers of the prairies are better farmers than they were 25 years ago. They use better implements and better tillage practices to conserve moisture and prevent soil drifting; they use better methods to control moisture-using and fertility-stealing weeds. Partly the result of this, many farmers in the traditional drought areas of the Prairie Triangle have wheat on hand from previous crops.

Permanent legislation buying the farm economy of the prairies against disaster includes the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act, the Prairie Farm Assistance Act and the Agricultural Stabilization Act.

The first of these, commonly called PFRA, has its roots in the Thirties. Under the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration, thousands of dugouts and dams, ranging from small stock watering dams to major irrigation projects, have been constructed to conserve water on dryland farms.

Under the second, PFPA, partly contributory crop failure payments are made to grain farmers. This act came into being before Second World War prosperity began to lift the farmer and this year's probable total payments of about $60,000,000 will be a record.

What caused the greatest concern in federal government and prairie circles when the extent of the drought became apparent in midsummer was fear that the slowly and carefully built up diversity of prairie agriculture in the past war era would be dissipated in panic marketing of cattle, Man-dan-dan-dan supports under the new Agricultural Stabilization Act—a stop loss for the farmer—in combination with a series of timely emergency government actions, helped prevent that.

Mr. Hamilton met prairie agriculture ministers July 2 and announced a six-point "save the cattle" program: Freezing of oats and barley supplies in stricken areas; provision of grain supplies for feed this year and seed next spring; with municipalities paying elevator storage charges; an educational program to show farmers how to

4 Glutinous Sea

Oatmeal Sludge

By CAMANDRA, from London

SIR COMPTON MACKENZIE has been recounting how he can remember that when he was very young he sat on the knee of an old soldier who had fought at the Battle of Waterloo.

Mr. Compton is 78 and the Battle of Waterloo was fought 166 years ago in 1815.

The remarkable thing about his living link with the past is that Sir Compton can remember things quite clearly from the age of EIGHT MONTHS onwards.

There is a heroic note in these stirring memories of Henry and the Duke of Wellington and Blucher and the Scots Greys and the playing fields of Eton.

It Was Burnt

My first recollection—I was about the age of three—was not of bugles and musketry, the tradition of The Colors and the thin red line.

It was of Porridge. Miss Cowie's Porridge—and burnt at that.

Mary Tudor said in 1538 that "when I am dead and opened, you shall find 'Cahin' lying in my heart."

When I am dead and opened you shall find "Miss Cowie's Porridge" lying in my heart.

"Porridge"? If ever a word describing a food had the sound of its meaning, it is "Porridge"—the slup and slur and cotive slurp of the unpalatable.

Submerged

Miss Cowie and her Porridge came into my life when my mother and father were away. She was in charge of the house, and, submerged below the scum and skin and skin of her Porridge, I can recall the hateful remembrance of her eyes of unwinking blue, her lack-lustre hair like slag and her mind, so fixed and firm.

The table was up to my neck.

The huge brimming plate with the oatmeal sludge and the swimming Zaidor Zee of milk lay endlessly before me. Seeing my infantile nausea Miss Cowie said: "The Porridge will be eaten." Not, mark you, "Please eat up your Porridge."

Thirty years later, when in the army, I came across Miss Cowie's same authoritative phraseology. Daily orders did not actually say that "the Porridge WILL be eaten," but in the same imperious Cowie terms they did lay down that "equipment WILL be cleaned" and that brass WILL be cleaned.

Glutinous Sea

How I remember that lake of oatmeal sludge, far too much for any infantile stomach, no matter how glutinous, to contain a glutinous sea of salt and milk and coarse oats all sludged together under the Calvinistic battle cry of "It will do you good and make you grow up into a big boy."

I always wondered about that stuff.

In Scotland, where the crime was first committed, this revolting compound is blasted after being poured scalding hot into a bowl stirred by "a spurtle" and quenched with cold milk or sour buttermilk blessed by John Knox and accompanied by a cold lava of coarse salt.

Hair shirts are compulsory.

Criminal Mess

Great hunkies men, fresh from killing the monarch of the Glen, have been known to be quite cheery about this criminal mess.

They say that the test of good oatmeal porridge is that each grain shall be distinct and soft enough to be level in the bowl, and that eaten in the heather and with the pipes a'blarin', it should cut cheery and never cling to the dish or spoon.

Miss Cowie, I was told in later life, was "A Good Woman."

But to me, blubbing in a bowl of cooling Porridge with the hot salt tears running down my nose, she was the first implacable frontier of life.

Sir Compton Mackenzie has the ancient churning of Waterloo about his temples.

I have Miss Cowie and the smell of stodgy Porridge to be rammed into a parcel of small wincing guts and burnt Porridge at that.

The Packback

Unseen Sunsets

By GREGORY CLARE

NOW that the glorious windy sunsets of late August are to be viewed by their devotees, it is the right time to repeat some comments of one of the leading sunset-watchers of my acquaintance. "Let us stand here," he said, "as the sky started to ignite with all the splendor of wind-ragged streaks of clouds and far-off piles of cumulus. And think of all the people passing who don't even glance at it."

It was true. On foot and in cars, a steady procession of citizens, with something on their minds streamed past us on the hilltop, heading for home.

"Sunsets, like nothing else," said he, "reveal the total difference of modern man to his natural surroundings. Automation is not coming. It is here. Man has become automatic ahead of the machine. All you have to do is look at these thousands of people, men and women both, streaming home head to tail, with never a yard of space between bumpers. If they can help it, to realize that something final and fatal has happened to us. Look! Nearly all of them have their sun visors pulled down!"

The sunset lasted about 10 minutes, and made the artistic imaginations of all time, from Cheops to Picasso, seem scribbly.

A Challenge

Uniform Curricula

From the Winnipeg Free Press

OVER the past weekend two provincial premiers (Mr. Roblin and Mr. Manning) have made statements on the prospect of greater uniformity in school curricula across Canada. They are far from being in accord.

The Alberta premier is reported as saying it is "unrealistic" to hope for uniformity in education among the provinces. The best that can be hoped for, he says, is a clarification of different grade categories to help students transferring from one province to another. This seems unduly pessimistic, as if the effort to establish more uniform curricula were scarcely worth the effort.

Mr. Roblin, while making no claim that all difficulties may be overcome, approaches the subject from a different standpoint. The mobility of the Canadian work force, he points out, challenges the provinces to work toward uniformity. This is a more helpful and positive attitude.

The statements of the two premiers are an affirmation of the Charlottetown meeting, during which more uniform educational standards were discussed.

It is to be hoped that, in the education ministers' conference, Mr. Roblin's more positive approach will prevail. Standardized education across Canada may be neither necessary nor desirable, but it is surely possible to achieve a greater degree of uniformity in curricula than is now the case.

From the Scriptures

If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.—1 John, 1:8.

Many Teen-Agers Don't Want It

They Drink to Belong

VANCOUVER (CP)—Many of today's teen-agers take a drink they neither want nor particularly enjoy because of pressures of belonging to a gang, says an Anglican Minister.

"Teen-agers want to belong, and to some, going along with the gang on a drinking party seems the best way to do it," says Rev. L. M. McFerran, rector of the Anglican Cathedral of St. James.

While he says progressively more 15- to 20-year-olds have drinking problems, Father McFerran finds it encouraging that these youngsters now seek and want professional help with their problem.

He says he has found that the youth of today is more intelligent than his parents. Most had been exposed to liquor at parties and in their homes and looked on drinking realistically.

"They don't want to be told 'you mustn't.' They want to be told why not."

Laymen Ask Clear Plan Of Role

OSLO (AP)—Laymen attending the 10th World Methodist Council said yesterday there is need of a clear statement on the laity's role in the church's life.

In a four-point program submitted to the council's committee on lay activities, the laymen also asked for a statement on the Methodist laity's place in business and industry.

The program also requested periodic exchange of information in lay fields through a quarterly news letter; commended the use of prayer in world Methodist conference sessions.

THE VOICE OF ONE

By REV. DR. FRANK B. MORLEY

Young people in tens of thousands have now graduated from high school and university. The tragedy of schools and universities is that they make little effort to implant in youth seeds of individual life and growth. Indeed some teachers and professors take flendish glee in ruthlessly destroying spiritual values, leaving their students cynical, selfish, and shallow. You cannot raise upright men with lowdown standards.

Students enter a society which worships too much the smooth talker and the glad hander, the fellow with superficial social skills rather than the man of integrity and true worth. They will have to discover for themselves that a cultured man is not a smooth go-getter with a mouthful of wise-cracks. He has depth and breadth of thought, a feeling for others, an understanding of his time, and a desire to put more into the world than he takes out of it.

So their great problem is to keep devotion to quality in a world devoted to quantity. People are giving their first-rate loyalty to second-rate things. All about them is the menace of the trivial, people who seek happiness in back-slapping pleasure—seeking frivolity. The weekend activities of some people consist of a deliberate effort to seek out the cheapest and ignore the best. If young people do not watch out they will end up with "a barren levity of mind; the ear to no great harmonies inclined; the eye to all majestic meanings blind."

They face great difficulties, problems of living and thinking more dangerous and vast than the world has ever known, but it is better to light a candle than curse the darkness. Some will try to escape the challenge, ignore it or shrink from responsibility. Rapine is not the destiny of mankind and if they are seeking a soft spot they will find it only under their hat.

Wiseest Prudence

Courageous venture is the wisest prudence. Fools fail because they do not recognize the difficulty; wise men fail because they think the difficulties impossible.

Let them beware the sowers of rocks! On every hand they will hear people saying, "It's all right. Everybody does it." Good men and great men are always able and willing to stand alone. Others say, "I'm looking out for myself. I couldn't care less."

The doom of such selfish people is unhappiness. The mentally healthy people care and, the more they care, the greater their humanity. Cautious conformists will warn them "Don't stick your neck out." They will never get anywhere unless they do.

Cursed is the man who says, "It's the system; you got caught in it and have to go along with it."

Then others despairingly wash their hands of responsibility moaning, "It's wrong, but what can one man do about it?" Every institution is the lengthened shadow of a man. Every just law was formulated by some individual. No committee and no government ever made a great work of art.

Young people are faced with four problems—security, sex, authority, and vocation. Security must come from personal integrity, not from external conditions. Sex is either a sin or a sacrament. License must end in tyranny, therefore they must learn to seek spiritual and moral authority, the authority of the best men and women. They will only find joy in life when their work becomes a vocation.

Garden Notes

Gamble Paid Off

By M. V. (RENNETT, PENN.)

Those gardeners who were far-sighted enough to sow onion seed last autumn certainly hit the jackpot, for thanks to the mild winter, they came through without even losing their leaf tips and have made fine, plump bulbs which are ripening now. It doesn't always work out this well, but the sowing of onions in late summer is always a good gamble, and the coming week is just about the ideal time to get them in.

Tripoli, Giant Rocca and Autumn Triumph are all good varieties for a late August or early September sowing, but for my money, Hybrid Autumn Spice is the best of the lot. This onion has excellent storage qualities and will keep just as long as the spring sown crop. You can't sow just any old variety, for only certain kinds are able to keep on growing through the short days of winter.

The site for sowing any of these types should not be too rich, or the seedlings will be too lush and sappy to stand up under winter cold. They will need rich ground to finish off, but for sowing, choose a plot which was manured last year and which has just been cleared of its summer crop. The seedlings can be transplanted to really rich ground next spring.

Give the selected piece of ground a dressing of hydrated lime one cupful per square yard, and fork it over lightly. Work it down to a fine tilth with the iron rake, then tread it and rake it again lightly. When you tread it, make sure the footprints are all of even depth, for puddles will stand in any soft spots through the winter rains.

Make your seed furrows all half an inch deep and 10 inches apart, and if the ground is very dry, pour a little water in the furrows very slowly and gently. Sow thinly and cover shallowly, and it is a good idea to scatter an inch of fresh lawn mowings over the sown rows to conserve soil moisture.

Do not water or give any fertilizer now or after the seedlings come up, for this crop must be grown "hard" to withstand the winter weather. About the only attention the seedlings will need is hoeing between the rows and hand weeding in the rows themselves.

Onions from last fall's sowing and from seeds and sets and transplants set out this spring are approaching maturity, and from here on in, they should have no more fertilizer or stimulants of any kind, and such water as falls naturally as rain. It isn't likely the bulbs will get any bigger now, and our principle concern from this date to harvest is to develop good storage quality in them.

Watch the tips of the leaves, and when these start to turn yellow, bend over the foliage—to the north if the rows are running north and south. This is to avoid shading the bulbs. At the same time scrape a little soil away from around each onion so the bulb is sitting right up on top of the ground with only its roots buried.

When the foliage is more yellow than green, even if not completely ripened, the onions may be taken up—not by the scruff of the neck, for this tends to crack the protective outer skin, but gently, with a digging fork. Leave the tops and roots on for now, and spread the crop out in a dry, sunny place for a good baking in the sun, turning them occasionally. When the tops and roots crumble when rubbed, clean up the bulbs and store in a cool, dry, airy place.

Pretty $2,000-a-Day Toys

MONTE CARLO — The longest and most unlikely sight in the lovely yacht harbor here is the Shemara, the 800-ton yacht of Lady Docker. Lady Docker, as I guess everyone now knows, is not allowed ashore, not only in Monte Carlo but anywhere on the Riviera, a penalty for having offended Prince Rainier. However, the Shemara is under charter to a moneybags named Semencko for a reported $2,000 a day. Since the ban on the Dockers does not extend to their boat, it is tied up here.

It's been a long time since J. P. Morgan was asked how much it costs to run a yacht. His celebrated answer, "Anyone who asks that question can't afford it," seems out of date. The other day there were 335 yachts in Cannes harbor, so obviously quite a lot of people can afford it. Anyhow, they do it.

But what do you get for $2,000 a day? Actually you don't have to rent the Dockers' yacht. You can get quite a nice yacht for as little as $1,000 a day. So there you sit at $1,000 a day on your rented yacht. What happens next? I asked Andre Sonier, the director of the Hotel

Carlton and one of the leading lights in the building of the Cannes new yacht club, that question.

"They go to the islands for breakfast," said Sonier. "Takes about 10 minutes. That figures out to about $500 a mile."

You can hardly ask for a better status symbol than that. Five hundred dollars a mile is extraordinary status. But not the ultimate in status. Probably the ultimate in status is Stavros Niarchos' huge and beautiful sailing ship, the Creole, which is tied up at Villefranche, and almost never sails anywhere because it requires such an enormous crew that there is no room left for passengers. A sailing ship that doesn't sail but simply lies there, eating up money, can hardly be improved on in the status line.

There's another yacht here, the Dubou III, which plies from Cannes to Eden Roc and back. Of course, you can cover the same ground by car in 15 minutes but without the exquisite pleasure of its costing you $1,000 a day. Then, of course, there's Lady Docker, who is a rather special case. She can cruise around the Riviera on her big boat which requires a crew of 30 to minister to the wants of 12, which is all it sleeps. But she can't get off. Next to a boat that is tied to a bit of ground and never goes anywhere, a boat that can go somewhere but is not permitted to touch shore is even more extravagantly useless.

Still, they're such pretty toys that I must confess I'd rush to buy one, too, if I could afford it. Thank God, I can't, thus being saved the wear and tear of thinking of something to do with the craft every day.

Of course, the marvelous and terrible thing about any status symbol is that there's no end to it. You work and slave all your life to own a yacht. Finally, you have it—only to discover some of the very best people have two yachts.

As a matter of fact, there's an even greater status symbol than owning a yacht, which is not owning a yacht—like Jack Warner or Prince Karim, two of the Riviera's most celebrated non-yacht owners, who are so rich they don't need yachts to proclaim it. But, of course, you have to be fearfully rich to be able to afford no yacht at all.

Frankie Gets His Way

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Whatever Frank Sinatra wants he usually gets. His friends believe he will make another offer to David Merrick for the screen rights of Merrick's coming Broadway musical, "Subways Are For Sleeping." Frankie's $250,000 down without the additional guarantee of $750,000 was insufficient for Merrick who has more hits than mimes in the theatre.

I had a hunch about the reason for the cancellation of the clan's cruise on the Mediterranean. Apparently it was criticism in Washington that, while the world situation was so tense, Sinatra, Peter Lawford, Janet Leigh, Dean Martin, et al, should not be living it up in the vicinity of the president's father, Joe Kennedy.

Barbara Stanwyck never lies. And she'll frank about her disappointment "that we only had one season on TV, why lie about it?"

Fashion writer Arlene Dahl will have some competition from Polly Bergen who is writing a book titled, "Polly Bergen's Book of Beauty and Fashion." . . . Wave Cochran flew to Saratoga Springs, N.Y., for a vacation. Same time, wife Betsy flew to her native Copenhagen. And no one here seems certain that they will ever fly back to each other again!

Hitler's Eva Braun had a sister. And Vera De Winter will portray her in Allied Artists' movie about the late unlamented dictator, "Hitler."

You can't accuse RCA-Victor recording star Marc Cooke of being pansy about his career. When offered $30,000 to appear for one week in Rio De Janeiro in June 1962, Sam quipped, "They'll have to wait for an answer. I don't believe in snap decisions."

Anita Ekberg's co-star in "La Dolce Vita," Yvonne Furneaux, will marry cameraman Jacques Nahson . . . Marcello Mastroianni "revealed" during an interview that he dreams about Brigitte Bardot every evening. "It's a nightmare," he sighed.

Mae West will think twice before appearing again in summer stock near Chicago. According to report, the reviews were not good. Mae has all the money she can ever spend. But an actress likes to act, and get good notices.

Pat Boone dispatched his own interior decorator here from New Jersey to "do" his new home in Beverly Hills.

England's two top money stars, Sir Alec Guinness and Dirk Bogarde, are teamed together for a little son number, "The Mutineers," that might be competition for Marlon Brando's "Mutiny On The Bounty." Alec plays a dominating sea captain of the Napoleonic era. Dirk is a sadistic officer. Sounds a lot like "Mutiny."

Eleanor Powell, who has plunged into her dancing career with a vengeance since her divorce from Glenn Ford, is now eyeing one of Broadway's future musicals.

Special buses will run between downtown Victoria and Colwood fairgrounds, next week during a four-day carnival.

The carnival will open at noon each day and close at midnight Tuesday to Friday.

Buses will leave from 900

Government Street at 1 p.m., 3 p.m., 3:30 p.m., 4:30 p.m., 5:15 p.m., 6 p.m., 7 p.m., 8 p.m., and 9 p.m. Return buses will leave Colwood fairgrounds on the half hour until about 9 p.m.

Rides at the carnival will include a Ferris wheel, Roll-a-plane, Tilt-a-whirl and merry-go-round, and concessions and side-shows include a fun house, snake show and a circus side-show.

The near-bankrupt B.C. Agricultural Association, which rents the Colwood fairgrounds, will be given a guaranteed minimum of $100 a day for use of the property.

The BCAA needs some $5,000 to enable it to pay bills and stay in existence, manager Ian McCaul said last night.

"We must have the money to be able to continue negotiations with companies interested in helping develop Colwood Park," he said.

A public fund and a benefit variety show in Memorial Arena recently raised $650 for the BCAA.

Future of Polio Still Mystery

Health officials are happy about British Columbia's low polio toll this year, but they aren't too optimistic for the future.

"Polio is a very difficult disease to do much guessing about," Dr. G. P. Amyot, deputy provincial health minister, warned yesterday. "It happens periodically that we get these very low years."

Only three cases of polio have been reported in British Columbia this year. There were 110 cases of polio reported by the end of August last year.

"It might be due to two causes this year," Dr. Amyot said. "It might be an unusually low year and the effects of inoculation with Salk vaccine."

Salk vaccine was first used in B.C. extensively in 1955, he added, but "low" years were experienced before then.

In 1924 there were only three cases reported; in 1932, five cases; in 1949, no cases, and in 1954 there were seven cases.

"This irregular cycle is a trend in polio, but Salk vaccine has been of tremendous value to us. Salk vaccine is a very important part of the control program and should be used by everyone."

Names of more than 70 Vancouver Island high school students eligible for first-class B.C. government university entrance scholarships were announced yesterday.

The first-standings in awarded all students to B.C. high schools who made 80 per cent or more in final examinations. They receive half their tuition free from the government.

There were 346 eligible in the province.

Vancouver Island scholarship winners were:

University of British Columbia: Robert Fickmann, 21, son of Adolf Eichmann, tried recently in Israel on charges of mass murder of Jews.

University of Victoria: John Lusk, 30, son of William Lusk, 30, who was tried recently in Israel on charges of mass murder of Jews.

Ancient Cannon Ball Now Not So Ancient

An unofficial estimate putting the age of a cannon ball recovered in the Gulf Islands at about two centuries, yesterday was revised to something less than 100 years.

Col. John Symons, curator of the B.C. Maritime Museum and a former artillery officer, said yesterday the cannon ball was definitely British and the workmanship indicated it was made in the latter half of the 18th century.

He said the ball, designed to carry an explosive charge and a quantity of shot, was simply because it had doubled been fired in practice. The cannon ball was found on Prevost Island by amateur historian P. A. Frattiger of Salt Spring Island.

The curator also said the cannon ball was of a size and weight that could only have been fired by a 64-pounder. This type of armament was generally adopted by the Royal Navy well into the 19th century.

"I would say the cannon ball probably dates back to the 1780s," said Col. Symons.

The navy was asked to recover the cannon ball from Mr. Frattiger's private collection.

Clouds of Smoke to Stay

Minimum—Another Year

City's Future Still Hazy

By TED FULFORD

Tough bylaws, into property owners and enraged homeowners notwithstanding, the grey clouds of smoke which belch across the city daily from industrial stacks are going to keep right on belching for at least another year.

If we any comfort to them, however, people who live in the path of the smoke are assured by city officials that the problem isn't getting any worse.

Unfortunately, they add, it isn't getting any better either.

While it is true the city's smoke-makers can now be haled into court for turning the air sour with their fumes, it is also true that they needn't fear the arm of the law for some time to come.

"They're good chaps," said one city official, "and it's going to take them a little time."

Least the lady whom weekly wash is turned into a black ruin by the smoke, jumps to conclusions, the lack of improvement apparently cannot be blamed on a "soft" attitude by enforcement officers.

There's one sure fire way of stopping the smoke," says city engineer James C. Garnett crisply, "and that's by closing them all up."

"Personally, I think we'd rather have the smoke and keep those hundreds of men working."

Mr. Garnett pointed out that for truly prodigious smoke producers, such as B.C. Forest

... WAIT TILL NEXT YEAR

Products, the problem is going to cost tens of thousands of dollars to solve.

"I think you'll begin to see a difference by this time next year."

He agrees that the present problem in Victoria's no-man's-land of smoke is just being able to see, period.

Has the smoke blanket actually become thicker since a bylaw was passed which seeks to curb the nuisance?

Mr. Garnett thinks not. "Certainly the companies wouldn't increase their smoke output just because we passed a law to control it. The reason so many people are annoyed now is that the problem has been brought to their attention by passing the law."

Smoke-stuffed motel operators out along Gorge Road, however, say that the smoke being deposited in their swimming pools is thicker now than ever.

City and Chamber of Commerce officials agreed yesterday that a certain care must be exercised in dealing with the companies involved, because they do, after all, employ large numbers of men.

Meanwhile, the city's inspector of smoke, Tom Walker, is nudging the companies gently but firmly in the direction of smoke elimination.

And Mayor Percy Scurrell—who explains that "Mr. Walker is one of nature's gentlemen"—agrees with the plan of getting plant operators' co-operation in a nice way.

Is smoke hunter Walker being tough enough? "I couldn't say," mused the mayor, "but I do know he's a very fine gentleman."

Eclipse Intrigues Many—Science Says 'Ho-Hum'

While hundreds of Victorians watched the almost-total eclipse of the moon last night, science by-passed the phenomenon with a calm "ho-hum."

Shades were clear at moonrise and the latter part of the eclipse was clearly visible. But astronomers at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory had their telescopes trained elsewhere.

"Very little to be learned from it," said one.

Scientists Take Up Hunt For Lurking Submarines

By IAN STREET

Canadian and American scientists join forces next week off the Queen Charlotte Islands to seek more information on detection of lurking enemy submarines.

Taking part in the three-week expedition to seek more basic knowledge of underwater acoustics will be two RCN auxiliary vessels from Esquimalt and an American ship from Scripps Institute of Oceanography, San Diego, Calif.

HEADS GROUP

Dr. C. D. McConnell will head the group of seven acoustic specialists from Pacific Naval Laboratory who with three summer students will sail late Monday for Prince Rupert aboard the naval auxiliary vessel Whitehorse.

A three-man oceanographic group from Nanaimo, headed by Dick Herlihy, will travel aboard the Oshawa, which in the latter stages of the trip will carry out independent oceanographic studies.

SHIPS JOIN

The ships will be joined in Prince Rupert by the American ship Hugh Smith, carrying Scripps scientists.

First stage of the joint venture will be devoted to seismic studies of the sea bottom from Hecate Strait, north of the Queen Charlotte, out over the edge of the continental shelf into the deep waters of the North Pacific.

The "shooting ship" following a predetermined course, will drop a series of explosive charges and sound waves bursting off the sea bottom will be recorded by the other two vessels, stationed at either end of the seismic range.

Geological structure of the sea bottom in the area will be determined this way.

The information will be used in later tests to find out how the sea bottom at varying depths affects underwater acoustics.

In the final stage of the joint operation, Whitehorse, packed with complex electronic listening and recording equipment, will pick up "pings" sent out by the American vessel which is fitted with a powerful single frequency sound source.

For the Present

Pat Bay Stays At Two Lanes

Starting date for construction of a two-lane, 2.8-mile diversion of the Patricia Bay Highway probably won't be announced until next month, a provincial highways department spokesman said yesterday.

At the same time he spoked hopes that the new road would be built to four lanes immediately.

RIGHT-OF-WAY

He confirmed reports that the highways department was purchasing right-of-way of 150 feet for the diversion, but said present plans called for a two-lane road.

(A Colonist report Thursday hinted there was a strong possibility the provincial government would put up funds to cover the cost of the additional two lanes.)

ROAD DIVERSION

The project was clinched Thursday with the announcement from Ottawa that the federal and provincial governments had reached agreement on the plan to divert the road to make way for airport expansion.

Under the terms of the agreement, the provincial government will handle negotiations for right-of-way, plus the actual construction of the diversion. The federal government will reimburse the province for the cost, estimated at $375,000.

NOT COMPLETE

The highways department spokesman said negotiations for right-of-way were not yet complete.

He said the new diversion would start from the existing highway at Larchdale Drive and return to the old highway at Ardwell, where the highway turns toward Swartz Bay.

The new route will bring the highway to within less than half a mile of Sidney.

Fatal Ride

Can't Say Who Drove Sailor Tells Hearing

A Royal Navy rating testified yesterday he could not say who was driving a car in which a second British sailor was killed last Saturday in Esquimalt, or even when the car began its death drive.

Leading Mechanical Engineer Leonard Ronald Weightman, seaman aboard the Royal Navy ship HMS Londonderry which visited Victoria last weekend, was testifying at preliminary hearing of a charge of causing death by criminally negligent driving, laid against RCN member Charles William Logan, 432 Craigflower.

Logan is charged as driver of the car in which Mechanical Engineer James Roy, 26, of Grimaby, England, died instantly in a crash on Admirals Road.

Community Chest president Eric Mallett said acceptance by the board would increase slightly this year's campaign goal of $310,000.

Mr. Mallett said the preliminary canvass of business and industry, and special names section, was meeting a favorable reception. "Indications are that we are doing slightly better than last year at this time."

Officials were hopeful that a decision by B.C. Electric directors to continue the company's annual grant to the Vancouver Community Chest would be extended to this city's drive.

Last year the B.C. Electric contributed $7,500 to the Victoria appeal.

Boys' Club Favored By Chest

An executive meeting of the Victoria Community Chest has agreed to recommend to the board of directors that the Boys' Club be accepted as a United Appeal agency.

The recommendation, made at an executive meeting Thursday, will go before a meeting of the board next Friday.

Community Chest president Eric Mallett said acceptance by the board would increase slightly this year's campaign goal of $310,000.

Mr. Mallett said the preliminary canvass of business and industry, and special names section, was meeting a favorable reception. "Indications are that we are doing slightly better than last year at this time."

Yesterday's hearing session was called just to hear Weightman's testimony. His ship leaves the West Coast this weekend.

Weightman told Magistrate William Oatley he had gone to a party on the evening of Aug. 19.

Tourists

Another Bonanza Ahead

Vancouver Island can expect still another bonanza tourist year in 1962. A. E. Walker, new president-elect of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, said last night.

Mr. Walker, who has been a member of the Chamber's directorate in Victoria for only a year, is manager of the city's main branch of the Bank of Montreal.

He foresees the increase because of hordes of visitors expected to visit Seattle next summer during the Century 21 Exposition.

BE READY

"We in Victoria and elsewhere on Vancouver Island can expect to see large numbers of those visitors, and we should make ample preparation for them," he said.

He is an ardent golfer. New vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce for the coming year is J. A. Williams of Yarrow's Ltd.

When Peter Bruton asked me to contribute a column to his "Notebook" while he was away on holidays, I was pleased to accept, because it gave me an opportunity to talk about something which is very close to me and about which I have deep personal feelings.

There are two words which must be spoken whenever one discusses health services in British Columbia, and these are "voluntary agencies." Without these organizations, our health services would not be anywhere near as effective as they are today.

I have long been an admirer of all those people within a community who donate so freely of their time and energies in order to further the work of some particular organization. Throughout British Columbia, one does not have to look very far to see the results of their work.

I am referring to the neighborhood citizens who willingly serve on boards of hospitals; the many ladies' auxiliaries which do such a splendid job of raising funds and providing the required supplies and equipment; the specialized agencies which raise funds to combat specific health problems, and who do such a magnificent job in so many other ways; and the people who help so much in the mental health field.

These people rarely get the credit they deserve, but there is no doubt that their contributions together form a most significant part of the overall programming of health services.

Their actions are essentially democratic in origin, and are the best means of accomplishing the objectives. Their work is what makes a society a true community, because it is working together which makes a program truly effective.

We in British Columbia are very fortunate in many respects, but most particularly we are fortunate in the way in which these many volun-current estimated expenditures for this department.

I believe that we in British Columbia are again fortunate in the calibre of staff which is employed in the civil service of your provincial administration. The 4,200 employed by this department carry out the many diverse services provided under our public health branch, mental health services branch and the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

Just about every type of job is to be found within these classifications, and all contribute toward the sum total of our overall health programming. These employees have shown over and over again their dedication to their duties and responsibilities, and regardless of the government which is in office, these people faithfully serve their capacity as civil servants, unswerving and expanding the health services of this province in accordance with the policy set by the government.

As minister of health services and hospital insurance, I consider it a privilege to have become so familiar with the excellent work performed by the voluntary agencies of this province, and the splendid service provided through the civil service of this department.

Within the Department of Health Services and Hospital Insurance, there are more than 4,300 employees, making it the largest department of government. However, in the expenditure of funds, there are others which exceed the $36,341,467 which is listed in the

Property Owner Predicts:

Off-Street Parking Garages Will Be Rejected Thursday

City Hall's plan to build two off-street parking garages will be rejected when downtown property owners vote on the scheme Thursday, one of the property owners predicted last night.

"I have personally talked to many property owners involved in this vote and it would indicate that they are going to vote this bylaw down by a large majority," said Chester Downman, 724 Johnson Street.

STRAW VOTE

The Downtown Businessmen's Association said a straw vote among property owners recently which indicated an overwhelming majority in favor. But the straw vote covered less than half of the eligible voters.

Mr. Downman, a service station proprietor, said he was not given an opportunity to vote in the informal poll. Another property owner concerned, E. H. M. Foot, made the same charge recently.

FIRST YEAR CITED

"The first year would be the killer," Mr. Downman said. "It would take 12 months at least from the time the loan is obtained until the buildings are constructed and in use."

"This means there would be no income from the buildings for that year, but the capital charges—repayment of the loan and interest—would have to be met somehow."

"And under the terms of the bylaw the downtown property owners would be responsible for this payment."

CAPACITY

City Hall proposes to borrow $1,115,000 to build two downtown parking garages with a total capacity of 800 cars.

Some 220 downtown property owners will vote Thursday to indicate whether or not they will guarantee the city against any losses sustained in operation of the garages. Sixty per cent of those who vote must vote in favor for the bylaw to be adopted.

PROBLET UNBOUND

"I have personally gone into this parking proposal from both the legal and economic point of view and it is quite obvious this project is unsound on both counts," Mr. Downman continued.

"I have received independent legal opinion that this bylaw, if passed, can easily be quashed in a court of law."

"The city council has not indicated who will take the responsibility when they run out of money on this project when it is half completed. Will they come back for more money as they did with the Memorial Arena?"

At a double ring ceremony performed by Rev. G. R. Easter in First Baptist Church recently, Marion Laura, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Austin Elliott, Stroud Road, was united in marriage with Mr. Brian Ellis Clements, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clements, Wordsworth Street.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a gown of shimmering white brocade styled with basque bodice, scooped neckline and full hooped skirt billowing from a dropped waistline. Her veil of silk illusion misted from a single organza rose, and she carried a bouquet of red and white roses.

The bride's cousin, Miss Pam Elliott, was maid of honor and carried a basket of pale yellow flowers. The other three attendants were dressed identically in gowns of lime green nylon organza over taffeta, designed with very full skirts poised over crinolines, and fitted bodices softly gathered into a centre panel that extended into a portrait collar outlining the wide V neckline at front and back. ## St. Paul's, Sidney Scene of Wedding

Against a background of baskets of gladioli, Janice Loraine Morrey and Kenneth Harold Starck were united in marriage recently in St. Paul's United Church, Sidney. The double-ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Lloyd Hooper, and solemn Frank Aldridge sang "Perfect Love" with Howard Vine at the organ.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Murray of Sidney and was given in marriage by her father. Her attendants were Miss Barbara Starck, sister of the groom, maid of honor; Misses Lynda Mills and Dorothy Wood, as bridesmaids, and little Karen E. Ryland, cousin of the bride, flower girl.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Starck of Sidney, and was attended by Peter Sparks as best man, with Fred Egeand and John Braithwaite as ushers.

The lovely dark-haired bride had chosen for her wedding, a beautiful floor length gown of white nylon chiffon, the full gathered skirt floating over layers of net and taffeta. Brief sleeves and fitted bodice were of chiffon, shirred horizontally, and applied with guipure lace which also outlined the rounded Sabrina neckline, touched with pearls. A tiny coronet of pearls and iridescent sequins held her bouffant shoulder length veil of illusion net, and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and stephanotis.

The flower girl wore a short bouffant-skirted dress of deep mauve sheer over taffeta, and carried a basket of pale yellow flowers. The other three attendants were dressed identically in gowns of lime green nylon organza over taffeta, designed with very full skirts poised over crinolines, and fitted bodices softly gathered into a centre panel that extended into a portrait collar outlining the wide V neckline at front and back. # B.C. SAVAGED BY NEW FIRES RAIN COOLS NEWFOUNDLAND

Troops Join Fight

ST. JOHN'S Nfld. (UPI) — Heavy rain fell for the first time in three weeks in all regions of Newfoundland yesterday as more than 1,000 troops flown in by the federal government prepared to join weary Newfoundlanders in the summer-long battle against forest fires.

"The rain is the real new thing this morning," a fire official said as an emergency evacuation by train sleeping cars of patients of a hospital was called off.

The rain started shortly after midnight after a new onslaught forced 200 families to flee Glenwood, a community 15 miles west of Gander, where ravaging forest fires nearly engulfed the international airport earlier this week.

Three federal cabinet ministers flew in and immediately met with Newfoundland authorities. They were being followed by an additional 1,000 soldiers, airlifted on orders by Prime Minister John Diefenbaker. An initial group of 22 troops landed at Gander aboard air force transport planes, following an urgent call for federal help from Premier Joseph Smallwood.

UN Orders France To Quit Base

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Without a single dissenting voice, the UN General Assembly demanded Friday night that France pull her troops back into her base at Bizerte and negotiate to give the base up to Tunisia.

The assembly adopted a resolution to that effect by a vote of 66 to 0 with 30 abstentions. Three countries were absent.

But France had served notice that she would ignore any decision the assembly reached, and she boycotted the five-day special session that led up to the vote.

Her North Atlantic allies split on the roll call. Denmark, Iceland, Norway and Turkey voted for the proposal. The United States, Canada, Britain, and others in the alliance abstained.

Others voting in the affirmative were the European neutrals, the nine-nation Soviet bloc, six Latin-American countries and all Afro-Asian countries except Japan, which abstained.

Smallwood Links IWA to Fires

ST. JOHN'S Nfld. (CP)—Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland said Friday "most of the Newfoundland people believe the IWA is behind many of the fires" burning in the province's forests.

The IWA is the International Woodworkers of America (IWA) decertified as bargaining agent for Newfoundland's 15,000 loggers during a 1958 wood strike.

DELIBERATELY SET
Mr. Smallwood was asked in an interview whether he thought some of the province's fires were deliberately set.

"It doesn't matter what I think, but I know that most of the Newfoundland people believe the IWA is behind many of the fires,"

Asked for elaboration, Mr. Smallwood said, "Isn't that enough?"

1,000,000 ACRES
Earlier, Mr. Smallwood said the raging fires have burned 1,000,000 acres in Newfoundland—equal to three-quarters of the land area of Prince Edward Island.

Mr. Smallwood, calculating that each acre would have yielded 10 cords of pulpwood, said the 10,000,000 cords destroyed would have supplied Bowaters Newfoundland Pulp and Paper Mills and Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company, the province's two paper mills, for 10 years.

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP)—Shock troops and reserves were being mustered last night in many parts of British Columbia to battle a savage onslaught of new forest fires following a severe lightning storm.

The storm, accompanied by 30 to 40 miles-an-hour winds, cut a 400 by 50-mile swath through valuable stands of pine, spruce, hemlock and fir and with more than 50 new outbreaks had forest protection officers reeling.

The storm struck an area from Tweedsmuir Park in the cattle-rich Cariboo country, 310 miles northwest of Vancouver, southeastward to Penticton, in the heart of the fruit-growing Okanagan Valley, 150 air miles east of Vancouver.

SITUATION SAME
The situation was the same in both the Prince Rupert and Kamloops forest districts.

"Everything seemed to explode Thursday night," said Regd Jones, forestry spokesman at Smithers.

Norm McRae, assistant Kamloops forester, said here "the situation is extremely critical, worse now than it has been all summer."

CRITICAL STAGE
The storm came at a time when the manpower and machine situation in the Prince George and Prince Rupert districts reached the critical stage.

Forest service officials said the 2,522 fire fighters who have been working in the districts for weeks without time off are under great strain.

"Many of the men are bone-tired," said Jones. "They've been out on the fire lines working 24 hours a day for three weeks and need a rest and help. We are putting together new crews."

The crews are volunteers. There has been no conscription in the area.

FIREFIGHTERS WEARY
Pilots of the essential water bombers are also feeling the strain after hours in the air. Many of their aircraft are soon due for overhaul and there are no replacements.

A total of 696 men, assisted by 62 tractors, were fighting 161 fires, 44 the result of the Thursday night storm, in the Kamloops district.

TWO CAMPS
Two logging camps, owned by H. J. Gardner and Sons Ltd., were destroyed during the night when winds fanned two "spot-sized" fires between Horseshy Lake and Horseshy River, 20 miles south of here, into a 15,000-acre inferno.

In the Tweedsmuir Park district, the 30,000-acre Iliguk fire was reported crowning—flames jumping from treetop to treetop. It was burning through second-growth pine and spruce on a six-to-eight-mile front and stretched back 20 miles.

RANCHES IN DANGER
Five ranches lay in the path of the conflagration, three miles from its most advanced section. A huge fire guard, stretching for three miles along the front of the blaze appeared to be holding the fire.

"But with the fire entering a crowning phase, things could change quickly."

"A second guard now is being cut closer to the ranches."

Cattle in the district have been moved to safety.

In all, 856 men manning the fire line of 61 fires burning in the Prince Rupert district. Sixteen aircraft, including five water-bombers, more than 50 tractors and several trucks have also been pressed into service.

LONDON (Reuters)—Prime Minister Harold Wilson said yesterday almost 50 persons could have been defrauded of $1,000,000 in real estate deals.

He said evidence points to 17 persons being defrauded of $500,000 and they have yet to interview 30 more alleged victims which could swell the total past $1,000,000.

Fraud charges would likely be laid next week and civil actions may be brought.

The frauds are said to involve apartments and motels throughout the city which changed hands for small amounts of cash and shares now claimed to be useless.

Three directors of eight companies were involved in the investigation.

Police said one man complained he turned over property worth $130,000 for which he was to receive a registered mortgage against a downtown hotel. He also received 50,000 shares in two companies.

The man said the mortgage was never registered, his money was gone and he was now living in a single room.

A woman reported that her husband suffered a heart attack and died when they found that a $48,000 equity in a motel they turned over was lost. The woman now was living on social assistance.

William A. Craig, a lawyer hired by the attorney-general's department to oversee the investigation, said in many cases individuals acted against the advice of their lawyers.

'Reaction Beat Me' —Quadros

BRASILIA, Brazil (UPI) — President Janio Quadros resigned unexpectedly yesterday charging he had been defeated "by the forces of reaction" in and out of the country. His supporters immediately launched a strike and demonstration in Rio de Janeiro and an anti-American mob stoned the U.S. embassy there.

The 44-year old Quadros, in office only seven months, quit after an anti-Communist political opponent attacked him as a man who planned to betray the "democratic regime and traditions of Brazil."

BACKERS RALLY
But Quadros' backers immediately rallied to his support.

Railway workers in Rio stopped suburban commuter trains and a crowd of demonstrators chanting "Long live Janio" had to be broken up with tear gas when it became disorderly.

A mob estimated at 500 persons stoned the U.S. embassy, breaking several windows and throwing tear gas grenades into the U.S. information service office.

PUBLIC ORDER
The Archbishop of Rio de Janeiro, Cardinal D'Aguiar, appealed for calm and public order, but there were indications tension was spreading in the wake of Quadros' dramatic action.

The Brazilian finance ministry announced all banks will be closed until Tuesday "in view of the moment which the country is passing."

TO HIS SIDE
Quadros' political supporters also rallied to his side.

Recife Mayor Miguel Arraes said if Quadros' resignation was "forced by the reactionaries, it has no validity."

Foreign Minister Afonso Arinos offered his resignation. Quadros said he had been thwarted in his efforts to create a Brazil for Brazilians and that "terrible forces rose against me and delivered me to infamy under excuse of collaboration."

"I was defeated by the forces of reaction," he said.

TROUBLED MONTHS
Quadros handed in his resignation after seven troubled months in office. The chamber of deputies immediately accepted it and Ranieri, Mazzilli, president of the chamber, was sworn in as acting president until vice-president Jose Goulart returns from a visit to Communist China.

Goulart arrived in Singapore last night from Peking and disclosed he had signed a $56,000,000 trade pact with Peking. But he denied that Quadros' efforts to end Red China in the United Nations had anything to do with the pact. He said yesterday in an interview.

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Government sources said Friday Foreign Minister Adolfo Mugica will resign, if he has not already done so, because of the uproar over a meeting President Arturo Frondizi had this week with Cuban Economic Minister Ernesto Guevara.

Talks Bring
Resignation

OTTAWA (CP)—An increase in the armed forces manpower ceiling and higher expenditures for both military and civilian equipment and supplies may be among the defence projects to be recommended to Parliament when it resumes its session Sept. 7.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said after a cabinet meeting Friday the fourth this week—the government has concluded the general phase of its study of Canadian preparedness in light of the Berlin crisis.

He said earlier, during the course of the cabinet's series of almost daily meetings, that any buildup in Canadian forces and equipment would be along conventional—rather than nuclear—lines. Canada supports the idea of nuclear weapons for NATO only if NATO members can agree on a joint control plan.

Canada's armed forces manpower ceiling now is 140,000. It can be increased only by act of Parliament and the armed forces are generally up to strength now. Canada's commitment to NATO is fully up to its target.

PAY ALLOWANCES
The defence budget is about $1,800,000,000. If increased expenditures are put before Parliament they are expected to be mainly in the category of pay and allowances for troops and increased equipment and supplies for the emergency measures organization.

JANIO QUADROS

Hong Kong he favored Red China's admission to the UN.

Quadros' dealings with the Communist world had roused the anger of Carlos Lacerda, governor of Guanabara state and editor of a Rio de Janeiro newspaper. He bitterly attacked Quadros in a radio and television broadcast last night.

By coincidence, Quadros' resignation came seven years and a day after president Getulio Vargas of Brazil committed suicide after a run-in with Lacerda.

Lacerda in his attack on Quadros said there is a plan afoot to create a "political climate" similar to that which existed in 1935 when "Vargas gave plenty of rope to the Communists and then accumulated powers to combat them in conditions which ended up in a dictatorship."

Clouds of Smoke to Stay

City's Future Still Hazy

By TUD PULFORD

Tough bylaws, irate property owners and enraged housewives notwithstanding, the greasy clouds of smoke which belch across the city daily from industrial stacks are going to keep right on belching for at least another year.

If it's any comfort to them, however, people who live in the path of the smoke are assured by city officials that the problem isn't getting any worse.

Unfortunately, they add, it isn't getting any better either. While it is true the city's smoke-makers can now be haled into court for turning the air sour with their fumes, it is also true that they needn't fear the arm of the law for some time to come.

"They're good chaps," said one city official, "and it's going to take them a little time."

Least the lady whose weekly wash is turned into a black ruin by the smoke, jumps to conclusions, the lack of improvement apparently cannot be blamed on a "soft" attitude by enforcement officers.

"There's one sure-fire way of stopping the smoke," says city engineer James C. Garnett crisply, "and that's by closing them all up."

"Personally, I think we'd rather have the smoke and keep those hundreds of men working."

Mr. Garnett pointed out that for truly prodigious smoke producers, such as B.C. Forest Products, the problem is going to cost tens of thousands of dollars to solve.

"I think you'll begin to see a difference by this time next year."

He agrees that the present problem in Victoria's no-man's-land of smoke is just being able to see, period.

Has the smoke blanket actually become thicker since a bylaw was passed which seeks to curb the nuisance?

Mr. Garnett thinks not. "Certainly the companies wouldn't increase their smoke output just because we passed a law to control it. The reason so many people are annoyed now is that the problem has been brought to their attention by passing the law."

Smoke-stifled motel operators out along Gorge Road, however, say that the smoke being deposited in their swimming pools is thicker now than ever.

City and Chamber of Commerce officials agreed yesterday that a certain care must be exercised in dealing with the companies involved, because they do, after all, employ large numbers of men.

Meanwhile, the city's inspector of smoke, Tom Walker, is nudging the companies gently but firmly in the direction of smoke elimination.

And Mayor Percy Scourah—who explains that "Mr. Walker is one of nature's gentlemen"—agrees with the plan of getting plant operators' co-operation in a nice way.

In smoke-hunter Walker's opinion, however,

"I couldn't say," mused the mayor, "but I do know he's a very fine gentleman."

Eclipse Intrigues Many—Science Says 'Ho-Hum'

While hundreds of Victorians watched the almost-total eclipse of the moon last night, science by-passed the phenomenon with a calm "ho-hum."

Skies were clear at moonrise and the latter part of the eclipse was clearly visible. But astronomers at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory had their telescopes trained elsewhere.

"Very little to be learned from it," said one.

U.S., Canada Join Forces

Scientists Take Up Hunt For Lurking Submarines

By IAN STREET

Canadian and American scientists join forces next week off the Queen Charlotte Islands to seek more information on detection of lurking enemy submarines.

Taking part in the three-week expedition to seek more basic knowledge of underwater acoustics will be two R.C.N. auxiliary vessels from Esquimalt and an American ship from Scripps Institute of Oceanography, San Diego, Calif.

MEANS GROUP

Dr. C. D. Maunsell will head the group of seven acoustics specialists from Pacific Naval Laboratory who with three summer students will sail late Monday for Prince Rupert aboard the naval auxiliary vessel Whitehorse.

A three-man oceanographic group from Nanaimo, headed by Dick Herlihy, will travel aboard the Oshawa, which in the latter stages of the trip will carry out independent oceanographic studies.

SHIPS JOIN

The ships will be joined in Prince Rupert by the American ship Hugh Smith, carrying Scripps' scientists.

First stage of the joint venture will be devoted to seismic studies of the sea bottom from Herat Strait, north of the Queen Charlotte, out over the edge of the continental shelf into the deep waters of the North Pacific.

The "shooting ship," following a predetermined course, will drop a series of explosive charges and sound waves bouncing off the sea bottom will be recorded by the other two vessels, stationed at either end of the seismic run. Geological structure of the sea bottom in the area will be determined this way.

The information will be used in later tests to find out how the sea bottom at varying depths affects underwater acoustics.

In the final stage of the joint operation, Whitehorse, packed with complex electronic listening and recording equipment, will pick up "pings" sent out by the American vessel which is fitted with a powerful single frequency sound source.

To cut extraneous noise to a minimum, Whitehorse will drift with the tide, her engines dead, while the delicate hydrophones used to pick up pings will be suspended at varying depths from a buoy trailing about a mile astern of the ship.

The American vessel, meanwhile, will follow a set course until she is so far from the listening ship that no more signals are received. Data collected in this way will give information on long range sound propagation over a wide frequency range.

The Esquimalt-based ships are scheduled to return Sept. 15.

Another Bonanza Ahead

Victoria Essay No. 2 in Nation

A Grade 12 Victoria High School student, Pauline Owens, who last winter won the province-wide Canadian Legion essay contest was runner-up in the Dominion essay contest, a Legion spokesman said last night.

Vancouver Island can expect still another bonanza tourist year in 1962, A. E. Walker, new president-elect of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, said last night.

Mr. Walker, who has been a member of the Chamber of Commerce in Victoria for only a year, is manager of the city's main branch of the Bank of Montreal.

He foresees the increase because of hordes of visitors expected to visit Seattle next summer during the Century 21 Exposition.

BE READY

"We in Victoria are elsewhere on Vancouver Island can expect to see large numbers of these visitors, and we should make ample preparation for them," he said.

Speaking of his election as president, Mr. Walker said, "I feel that I'm only pinch-hitting. I had no idea this was in anybody's mind before the beginning of the week, but I'll give it the best I can."

THREE YEARS

Mr. Walker is married and has three children. He came to Victoria from Kelowna three years ago.

He is an ardent golfer. New vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce for the coming year is J. A. Wallace of Yarrow Bay Ltd.

Some 220 downtown property owners will vote Thursday to indicate whether or not they will guarantee the city against any losses sustained in operation of the garage. Sixty per cent of those who vote must vote in favor for the bylaw to be adopted.

PRIMAT UNSOUND

"I have personally come into this parking proposal from both the legal and economic point of view and it is quite obvious this project is unsound on both counts," Mr. Downman continued.

"I have received independent legal opinion that this bylaw, if passed, can easily be quashed in a court of law."

"The city council has not indicated who will take the responsibility when they run out of money on this project when it is half completed. Will they come back for more money as they did with the Memorial Arena?"

Fatal Ride

Can't Say Who Drove Sailor Tells Hearing

A Royal Navy rating testified yesterday he could not say who was driving a car in which a second British sailor was killed last Saturday in Esquimalt, or even when the car began its death drive.

Leading Mechanical Engineer Leonard Ronald Weightman, seaman aboard the Royal Navy ship HMS Londonderry which visited Victoria last weekend, was testifying at preliminary hearing of a charge of causing death by criminally negligent driving, laid against RCN member Charles William Logan, 452 Craigflower.

Logan is charged as driver of the car in which Mechanical Engineer James Roy, 26, of Grimby, England, died instantly in a crash on Admirals Road.

SHIP LEAVING

Yesterday's hearing session was called just to hear Weightman's testimony. His ship leaves the West Coast this weekend.

Weightman told Magistrate William Oatler he had gone to a party on the evening of Aug. 18 at Royal Roads. In a car whose driver he did not know, and was not sure when he left, although it was in a different car.

Asked by prosecutor J. N. McIlreath about refreshments, Weightman said they were served bottled beer.

"How were you seated in the car?" Mr. McIlreath asked.

"Logan was driving. I was in the middle, and Roy was on the right."

Boys' Club Favored By Chest

An executive meeting of the Victoria Community Chest has agreed to recommend to the board of directors that Victoria Boys' Club be accepted as a United Appeal agency.

The recommendation made at an executive meeting Thursday, will go before a meeting of the board next Friday.

Community Chest president Eric Mallitt said acceptance by the board would increase slightly this year's campaign goal of $310,000.

Mr. Mallitt said the preliminary canvass of business (advance gifts and special names section) was meeting a favorable reception — "indications are that we are doing slightly better than last year at this time."

Officials were hopeful that a decision by B.C. Electric directors to continue the company's annual grant to the Vancouver Community Chest would be extended to this city's drive.

Last year the B.C. Electric contributed $7,500 to the Victoria appeal.

Property Owner Predicts:

Off-Street Parking Garages Will Be Rejected Thursday

City Hall's plan to build two off-street parking garages will be rejected when downtown property owners vote on the scheme Thursday, one of the property owners predicted last night.

"I have personally talked to many property owners involved in this vote and it would indicate that they are going to vote this bylaw down by a large majority," said Chester Downman, 724 Johnson Street.

STRAW VOTE

The Downtown Businessmen's Association held a straw vote, among property owners recently which indicated an overwhelming majority in favor. But the straw vote covered less than half of the eligible voters.

Mr. Downman, a service station proprietor, said he was not given an opportunity to vote in the informal poll. Another property owner concerned, E. H. M. Foot, made the same charge recently.

FIRST YEAR CITED

"The first year would be the killer," Mr. Downman said. "It would take 12 months at least from the time the loan is obtained until the buildings are constructed and in use."

"This means there would be no income from the buildings for that year, but the capital charges — repayment of the loan and interest — would have to be met somehow."

"And under the terms of the bylaw the downtown property owners would be responsible for this payment."

CAPACITY TOO

City Hall proposes to borrow $1,115,000 to build two downtown parking garages with a total capacity of 600 cars.

I believe that we in British Columbia are again fortunate in the calibre of staff which is employed in the civil service of your provincial administration. The 4,300 employed by this department carry out the many diverse services provided under our public health branch, mental health service branch and the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

Just about every type of job is to be found within these classifications, and all contribute toward the sum total of our overall health programming. These employees have shown over and over again their dedication to their duties and responsibilities, and regardless of the government which is in office, these people faithfully serve their capacity as civil servants, devoting and expanding the health services of this province, in accordance with the policy set by the government.

As minister of health services and hospital insurance, I consider it a privilege to have become so familiar with the excellent work performed by the voluntary agencies of this province, and the splendid services provided through the civil service of this department.

New Fires Ravage B.C. Rainfall Helps in East

Troops Join Fight

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (UPI) — Heavy rain fell for the first time in three weeks in all regions of Newfoundland yesterday as more than 1,000 troops flown in by the federal government prepared to join weary Newfoundlanders in the summer-long battle against forest fires.

"The rain is the real new thing this morning," a fire official said as an emergency evacuation by train sleeping cars of patients of a hospital was called off.

The rain started shortly after midnight after a new onslaught forced 200 families to flee Glenwood, a community 15 miles west of Gander, where ravaging forest fires nearly engulfed the international airport earlier this week. Three federal cabinet ministers flew in and immediately met with Newfoundland authorities. They were being followed by an additional 1,000 soldiers, airlifted on orders by Prime Minister John Diefenbaker. An initial group of 222 troops landed at Gander aboard air force transport planes, following an urgent call for federal help from Premier Joseph Smallwood.

Quit Base UN Order To France

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Without a single dissenting voice, the UN General Assembly demanded Friday night that France pull her troops back into her base at Bizerte and negotiate to give the base up to Tunisia.

The assembly adopted a resolution to that effect by a vote of 85 to 0 with 30 abstentions. Three countries were absent.

But France had served notice that she would ignore any decision the assembly reached, and she boycotted the five-day special session that led up to the vote.

Her North Atlantic allies split on the roll call. Denmark, Iceland, Norway and Turkey voted for the proposal. The United States, Canada, Britain, and others in the alliance abstained.

Others voting in the affirmative were the European neutrals, the nine-nation Soviet bloc, six Latin-American countries and all Afro-Asian countries except Japan, which abstained.

Smallwood Links IWA to Fires

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland said Friday "most of the Newfoundland people believe the IWA is behind many of the fires" burning in the province's forests.

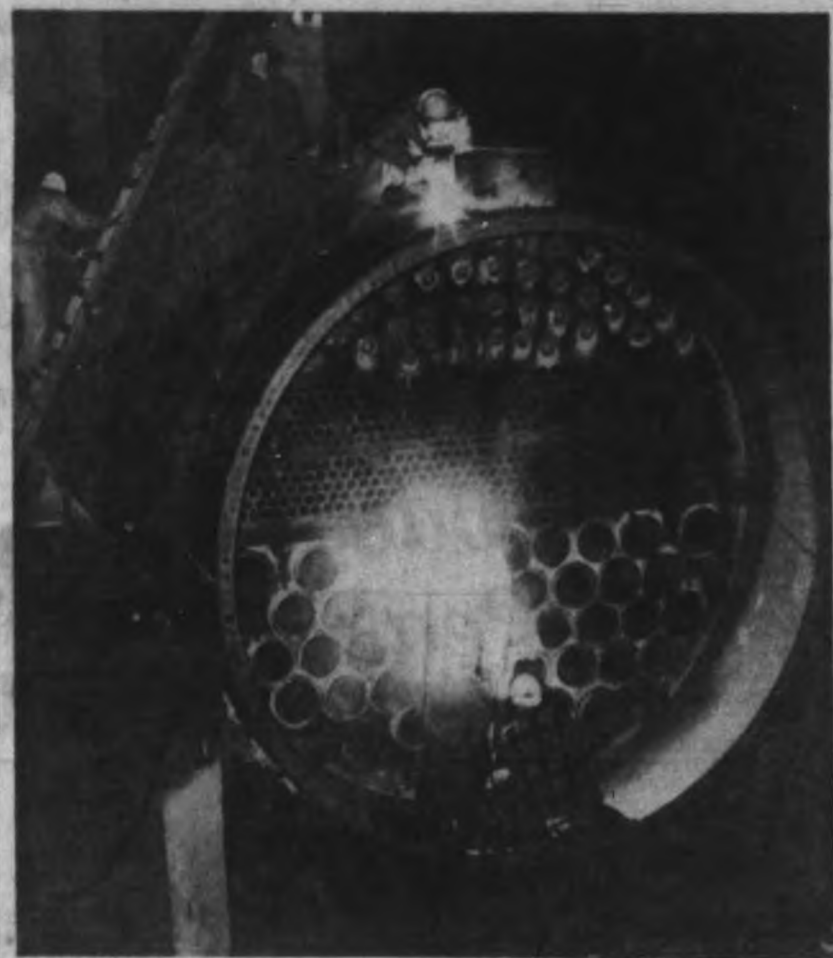

The IWA is the International Woodworkers of America (IWL) decertified as bargaining agent for Newfoundland's 15,000 loggers during a 1959 woods strike.

DELIBERATELY SET
Mr. Smallwood was asked in an interview whether he thought some of the province's fires were deliberately set. "It doesn't matter what I think, but I know that most of the Newfoundland people believe the IWA is behind many of the fires," he said.

Asked for elaboration, Mr. Smallwood said, "Isn't that enough?"

1,000,000 ACRES
Earlier, Mr. Smallwood said the raging fires have burned 1,000,000 acres in Newfoundland—equal to three-quarters of the land area of Prince Edward Island.

Mr. Smallwood, calculating that each acre would have yielded 10 cords of pulpwood, said the 10,000,000 cords destroyed would have supplied Bowaters Newfoundland Pulp and Paper Mills and Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company, the province's two paper mills, for 10 years.

Philip Bound For Argentina

LONDON (Reuters)—Prince Philip will visit Argentina next year, it was reported Friday night.

His visit is to begin March 22 and is expected to last about a week, the report said.

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP)—Shock troops and reserves were being mustered last night in many parts of British Columbia to battle a savage onslaught of new forest fires following a severe lightning storm.

The storm, accompanied by 30 to 50-miles-an-hour winds, cut a 400 by 50-mile swath through valuable stands of pine, spruce, hemlock and fir and with more than 50 new outbreaks had forest protection officers reeling.

The storm struck an area from Tweedsmuir Park in the cattle-rich Cariboo country, 210 miles northwest of Vancouver, southeastward to Penticton, in the heart of the fruit-growing Okanagan Valley, 150 air miles east of Vancouver.

SITUATION NAME
The situation was the same in both the Prince Rupert and Kamloops forest districts.

"Everything seemed to explode Thursday night," said Ted Jones, forestry spokesman at Smithers.

Norm McRae, assistant Kamloops forester, said here "the situation is extremely critical... worse now than it has been all summer."

CRITICAL STAGE
The storm came at a time when the manpower and machine situation in the Prince George and Prince Rupert districts reached the critical stage.

Forest service officials said the 2,522 fire fighters who have been working in the districts for weeks without time off are under great strain.

"Many of the men are bone-tired," said Jones. "They've been out on the fire lines working 24 hours a day for three weeks and need a rest and help. We are putting together new crews."

The crews are volunteers. There has been no conscription in the area.

PILOTS WEARY
Pilots of the essential water bombers are also feeling the strain after hours in the air. Many of their aircraft are soon due for overhaul and there are no replacements.

A total of 688 men, assisted by 62 tractors, were fighting 161 fires, 44 the result of the Thursday night storm, in the Kamloops district.

TWO CAMPS
Two logging camps, owned by H. J. Gardner and Sons Ltd., were destroyed during the night when winds fanned two "spot-sized" fires between Horseshoe Lake and Horseshoe River, 20 miles south of here, into a 15,000-acre inferno.

In the Tweedsmuir Park district, the 30,000-acre Ilguk fire was reported crowning—flames jumping from treetop to treetop. It was burning through second-growth pine and spruce on a six-to-eight-mile front and stretched back 20 miles.

RANCHES IN DANGER
Five ranches lay in the path of the conflagration, three miles from its most advanced section. A huge fire guard, stretching for three miles along the front of the blaze appeared to be holding the fire.

"But with the fire entering a crowning phase, things could change quickly," a second guard now is being cut closer to the ranches.

Cattle in the district have been moved to safety.

In all, 856 men manned the fire line of 61 fires burning in the Prince Rupert district. Sixteen aircraft, including five water-bombers, more than 50 tractors and several trucks have also been pressed into service.

Forest Opening 'Risk'

Vancouver forest district officials have decided to take a "calculated risk" and leave the district's forests open to vacationers this weekend.

But the chief forester warned that any rash of man-caused fires may result in further restrictions being imposed.

RAN LIFTED
A travel ban on the Vancouver Island section of the district south of Bowser has been lifted, which clears the entire island of travel restrictions. Still in force, however, is the ban against campfires.

The fire hazard was described as between "high and extreme" and continued warm, dry weather is forecast for the weekend.

SIX NEW FIRES
Up to 6 p.m. yesterday six new fires were reported in the past 24 hours, bringing the total number of fires burning to 35. There are 362 men on the fire lines.

Berlin Stirs Anew

BERLIN (Reuters)—Scattered incidents were reported on the East-West border Friday as East German Communist leader Walter Ulbricht came out with new threats to allied access to West Berlin.

Ulbricht declared all Western "intervention" must go and claimed the right to take control of the access routes—land, water and air—after the signing of a German peace treaty with Russia.

WARNING SHOTS
Meanwhile, Communist guards fired warning shots to scare away about 30 West Berliners who had crowded to the French sector.

The warning rattle of sub-machine-gun fire came after a guard warned the crowd to "go back 100 metres or we will shoot."

A West Berlin police spokesman said East Berlin police in another incident Friday night used a water cannon and threw tear gas grenades at a crowd near the border in the U.S. sector.

'Reaction Beat Me' —Quadros

BRASILIA, Brazil (UPI) — President Janio Quadros resigned unexpectedly yesterday charging he had been defeated "by the forces of reaction" in and out of the country. His supporters immediately launched a strike and demonstration in Rio de Janeiro and an anti-American mob stoned the U.S. embassy there.

The 44-year old Quadros, in office only seven months, quit after an anti-Communist political opponent attacked him as a man who planned to betray the "democratic regime and traditions of Brazil."

BACKERS RALLY
But Quadros' backers immediately rallied to his support. Railway workers in Rio stopped suburban commuter trains and a crowd of demonstrators chanting "Long live Janio" had to be broken up with tear gas when it became disorderly.

A mob estimated at 500 persons stoned the U.S. embassy, breaking several windows and throwing tear gas grenades into the U.S. information service office.

PUBLIC ORDER
The Archbishop of Rio de Janeiro, Cardinal DeBarros Camara, appealed for calm and public order, but there were indications tension was spreading in the wake of Quadros' dramatic action.

The Brazilian finance ministry announced all banks will be closed until Tuesday "in view of the moment which the country is passing."

TO RISK NIXE
Quadros' political supporters also rallied to his side.

Heads Mayor Miguel Arraes said if Quadros' resignation was "forced by the reactionaries, it has no validity."

Foreign Minister Afonso Arinos offered his resignation. Quadros said he had been thwarted in his efforts to create a Brazil for Brazilians and that "terrible forces rose against me and delivered me to infamy under excuse of collaboration."

"I was defeated by the forces of reaction," he said.

TROUBLED MONTHS
Quadros handed in his resignation after seven troubled months in office. The chamber of deputies immediately accepted it and Ranieri Mazzilli, president of the chamber, was sworn in as acting president until vice-president Joseo Goulart returns from a visit to Communist China.

Goulart arrived in Singapore last night from Peking and disclosed he had signed a $56,000,000 trade pact with Peking. But he denied that Quadros' efforts to seal Red China in the United Nations had anything to do with the pact. He said yesterday in various statements.

He said earlier, during the course of the cabinet's series of almost daily meetings, that any buildup in Canadian forces and equipment would be along conventional—rather than nuclear—lines. Canada supports the idea of nuclear weaponry for NATO only if NATO members can agree on a joint control plan.

Canada's armed forces manpower ceiling now is 140,000. It can be increased only by act of Parliament and the armed forces are generally up to strength now. Canada's commitment to NATO is fully up to its target.

PAY ALLOWANCES
The defence budget is about $1,600,000,000. If increased expenditures are put before Parliament they are expected to be mainly in the category of pay and allowances for troops and increased equipment and supplies for the emergency measures organization.

JANIO QUADROS

Hong Kong he favored Red China's admission to the UN.

Quadros' dealings with the Communist world had roused the anger of Carlos Lacerda, governor of Guanabara state and editor of a Rio de Janeiro newspaper. He bitterly attacked Quadros in a radio and television broadcast last night.

By coincidence, Quadros' resignation came seven years and a day after president Getulio Vargas of Brazil committed suicide after a run-in with Lacerda.

Lacerda in his attack on Quadros said there is a plan afoot to create a "political climate" similar to that which existed in 1935 when "Vargas gave plenty of rope to the Communists and then accumulated powers to combat them in conditions which ended up in a dictatorship."

Talks Bring
Resignation

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Government sources said Friday Foreign Minister Adolfo Mugica will resign, if he has not already done so, because of the uproar over a meeting President Arturo Frondizi had with Cuban Communist Minister Ernesto Guevara.

Forces Buildup Seen for Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—An increase in the armed forces manpower ceiling and higher expenditures for both military and civilian equipment and supplies may be among the defence projects to be recommended to Parliament when it resumes its session Sept. 7.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said after a cabinet meeting Friday the fourth this week—the government has concluded the general phase of its study of Canadian preparedness in light of the Berlin crisis.

He said earlier, during the course of the cabinet's series of almost daily meetings, that any buildup in Canadian forces and equipment would be along conventional—rather than nuclear—lines. Canada supports the idea of nuclear weaponry for NATO only if NATO members can agree on a joint control plan.

Canada's armed forces manpower ceiling now is 140,000. It can be increased only by act of Parliament and the armed forces are generally up to strength now. Canada's commitment to NATO is fully up to its target.

PAY ALLOWANCES
The defence budget is about $1,600,000,000. If increased expenditures are put before Parliament they are expected to be mainly in the category of pay and allowances for troops and increased equipment and supplies for the emergency measures organization.

William A. Craig, a lawyer hired by the attorney general's department to oversee the investigation, said in many cases individuals acted against the advice of their lawyers.

$1,000,000 Real Estate Fraud Being Uncovered in Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said yesterday almost 50 persons could have been defrauded of $1,000,000 in real estate deals.

They said evidence points to 17 persons being defrauded of $550,000 and they have yet to interview 30 more alleged victims which could swell the total past $1,000,000.

Fraud charges would likely be laid next week and civil actions may be brought. The frauds are said to involve apartments and mobile homes throughout the city, which changed hands for small amounts of cash and shares now claimed to be useless.

Three directors of eight companies were involved in the investigation. Police said one man complained he turned over property worth $130,000 for which he was to receive a registered mortgage against a downtown motel. He also received 55,000 shares in two companies.

The man said the mortgage was never registered, his money was gone and he now was living in a single room. A woman reported that her husband suffered a heart attack and died when they found that a $48,000 equity in a motel they turned over was lost. The woman now was living on social assistance.
